New Jersey music icon Southside Johnny Lyon is doing "fine" during the coronavirus outbreak — and he has plenty of toilet paper, too.

Lyon, frontman for the Asbury Jukes, shared an update on social media from his home in Ocean Grove on Monday.

He wanted to thank a fan who left a care package at his doorstep.

"I had a care package left on my porch today from a fan who left her initial as K," Lyon said. "It was four rolls of toilet paper, some candy bars, some toothpaste, (of which I was almost out), and a bottle of wine. And some hand sanitizer and wipes. I am very grateful. But now I have 24 rolls of toilet paper because I had bought some and then re-bought some before this whole thing started, and then my cleaning lady had left me a 12 pack. I have more toilet paper than I need for a year. If anybody needs some, send me an email.

"I am fine. I hope all of the Jukes and all of the Juke fans are doing well. Hang in there and we will have a party as soon as possible.

"Love, Uncle South"

Lyon, 71, is an architect of the Sound of Asbury Park with Bruce Springsteen, Steven Van Zandt and more, and a member of the New Jersey Hall of Fame. Asbury Jukes hits include "Talk to Me," "All I Want Is Everything," "Hearts of Stone," "Trapped Again," "I Don't Want to Go Home," "It's Been a Long Time" and "Having a Party."

Upcoming scheduled Jersey shows include June 6 at the Wellmont Theatre in Montclair; July 3 at the Stone Pony Summer Stage in Asbury Park and July 6 at the Ocean City Music Pier.

It'll be a party.
